LOVE SONNET OF A CAVE MAN

When One Loves Tensely
When one loves tensely words are naught, my Dear!
You never felt I loved you till that day
I sighed and heaved a chunk of rock your way;
Nor I, until you clutched your father's spear
And cooly clipped the lobe from off my ear.
Guesed the sweet thought you were too shy to say—
All mute we listened to the larks of May,
Silent, we harked the laughter of the year.

Later, my Dear, I'll say you spoke enough!
Do you remember how I took you, Sweet,
And banged your head against the frozen rill
Until I broke the ice, and by your feet
Held you submerged until your tongue was still?
When one loves tensely one is sometimes rough. —Don Marquis.

S. D. J.—"What character do you have in the next act?"
Girl—"I'm not supposed to have any character; I'm in the chorus." —Burr.

We asked our girl to go to church Sunday night, but her mother invited herself along—so we went to church.—Whirlwind.

Frosh (at Orph.)—"Give me two seats in L."
Ticket Seller—"Say, this ain't Hades." —Octopus.

Young Wife (reading her new movie scenario)—"Two burglars here enter the living hall, and the clock strikes one."
Bored Husband—"Which one?" —Voo Doo.

When Greek meets Greek, a Turk gets two at one shot. —Log.

"Say, how did you get off the Glee Club try out?"
"Made first bass on four bawls." —Chaparral.

RIPPING, WE'LL CALL IT

"Well, how do you like this barn storming life?" asked the inquisitive alumnus of the Scarlet Masker.
"Oh, sew-sew," replied the wardrobe "mistress," as he took another stitch in a ripped costume.—Sun Dial.

She mae have one herself upon her lappie,
Which she will hide, and than bee
very happie. —A. I. C.

_Virtuoso_—“That man just paid $4000 for a Whistler.”
_Seamstress_—“And you can get a Singer for about fifty.”

ODE TO A CATFISH

I see thy finny fins cut thru
The water’s edge so near.
And when I get real close to you,
Thy gentle meow I hear.
But when a dogfish comes your way,
And towards you makes a swerve,
I see that slimy back of yours
Round into one large curve.

Now we know why the Masquers choose “Step Thief” for their next production! They are getting into practice for next spring when the Treachours start stealing their therd!

WHAT EVERY COLLEGE MAN KNOWS

Where you get it.
That coed’s rating.
That girls think they know what a man thinks of what they think, if anything.
What his own ratio of acceptances is.
And, if you can get him to admit it, something about his studies.

LIKE KELLY DID

_Prologue_
Old Michael Kelly said that he could drink a keg of beer and knew it.
He tried it, but his stomach was too small, and so he didn’t do it.

One time as morning flushed the sky, McNish upon two pair did hid.
Against a full house tried to bluff—
he won the cash.
Like Kelly did.

A man named Cox drove through this town—right through at 45
he slid.
He passed Joe Shipley down the pike, and got away.
Like Kelly did.

A freshman once at chapel’s close mixed with the mob and, safely
hid,
Passed on. He kept his check and fooled the Dean, oh yes,
Like Kelly did.

Epilogue
“Like Kelly did” may look quite well,
But read aloud, it sounds “like h .”

TRAINED ANATOMY

incorrect, but it sounds odd to the English-speaking ear.”
COUTEAU ET FOURCHETTE
A Farce in One Smack
By Edna B. Taylor, '24

(Foreword: Little Willy sneaked down to the pantry the other night to steal a pie from the commuter shelf. He triedlighting the gas to help him find his prey, but burned his fingers instead and lost his knife. He fork down the cider jug. The following is his mateless version of the disaster, enacted at two the next morning. He attributes his ill fortune to Couteau and Fourchette's quarrel.)

Scene: The ridge of pies at the snitching hour. Couteau and Fourchette are discovered stewing away in the middle of the ridge. Both are headed uphill toward the cider stream and are seen to be quarreling violently.

Couteau: Methinks you nag of them hath a sulky look.
Fourchette: So? Then I'll have thee to know, sweet air, he may—and that with usury. Thou hast done naught but eke out my life—since first we ventured on this fearsome foot.
C: So, my wench? Thou hast a piercing tongue. Wert well yelded, by my curvoumbut! But, pardey, my voice is no harder on the brute than thy continual jag, jag, jag!
F: Thou slashest boldly—by my sylver times thou dost! Thy tongue hath overmuch practice. Grant it, I pray thee, a long, sweet rest. And leave my poor Piebald tongue hath overmuch practice. Grant it, I pray thee, a long, sweet rest. And leave my poor Piebald
C: Vain lass. I'll out upon him. My love is Winter—ah, how cold. The warm sun of friendship has softened its glassy shell—Leaving mushy, sodden mass within.

THE VISION OF SIR LONGFALL

By W. G. M., '24
Cut by Keeler, '23

Scene: The south terrace of ye Burton Hall.

Time: Don't be inquisitive; it's moonlight.

Characters: The Petite Princess, a Semite; Sir Longfall, a Knight from one of the Eight Enemy Castles.

Act One and All

Sir Longfall
But stay thee, Princess,
'Till I make my meaning clear; See! These three letters
Are reason enough I'm here!

Petite Princess
Burn them!

Sir Longfall
Nay, not so;
I'faith, why wrote thee thus?

Petite Princess
I told thee in yon script—

Sir Longfall
I read it, Princess,

Petite Princess
Why did I forget!

Sir Longfall
This eve—the hour past—

Petite Princess
Oh my vision, dear—

Sir Longfall
O-O-OH! My vision, dear—

Petite Princess
(The vision.)

Sir Longfall
I told thee, Princess,

Petite Princess
What a sight?

Sir Longfall
Ah, no!

Petite Princess
What a view?

Sir Longfall
Not yet!

Petite Princess
Spectacle?

Sir Longfall
Alas!

Petite Princess
Why did I forget?

Sir Longfall
Look?—Appearance?

Petite Princess
That's almost it.

Sir Longfall
Dream?—No; I can't quite

Petite Princess
Upon it hit!

RELATIVITY

Calm yourselves, ladies and gentlemen! This treatise doesn't deal with that relativism wherein the searcher may find a horse-thief dangling from his family tree, but with the great unrestricted Theory of Relativity which handles the most weighty concepts of distance, temperature, position, and velocity. And of these, velocity is the greatest.

Before entering the extended mathematical field of this subject, an anecdote will be related which demonstrates forcibly the thirst for knowledge of the Theory even among persons who think rarely, if ever, as such, as it were.

I had been dancing, one might say, with a fair young thing with rather more than a fair mop of black bobbed hair, a rather less than fair amount of evening gown, and a fair line. I explained the Theory:

"At the end of this dance, I cried, "I'll show you how the relative position of two bodies is affected by the relative velocities of the components. It is also a remarkable thing that the temperature attained varies as the fourth power of the velocity of one member and that fact is very powerful." "Assuming that the time-space concept is true, the distance is zero at once between two bodies of equal absolute velocities which causes a rapid coinciding of relative position."

Bong! The orchestra expired with a wave of sound and we found ourselves on the terrace under a moon apparently green with envy. We sat upon the wall and she delivered:

"And of such tone there's more. I ken no "mistake,"" I cried, "nor! I have forgot!"
For the benefit of the mass of talent which was stirred to life by that touching bit of oratory in chapel the other day, these few explanations: The great bulk of material for each issue should be furnished by those who are listed as "Contributors to this Issue" and not by members of the staff. The Staff is for the guidance, collection, and handling of such material. But one may rise in the ranks if one has the stuff. Contribution to three consecutive issues makes an individual eligible for membership on the Contributing Staff. Whether or not he attains that honor depends further on the quality and promise of those contributions, and on whether he expresses a desire to assume the obligations of Staff membership. Work on more than one consecutive issue is necessary before a Contributing Staff Member may be placed on the Executive Staff. Try-outs for the Business Staff are of a more individual nature and are determined exclusively by the Business Manager. Any Staff member, from the highest to the lowest, is at all times eligible for removal in case of gross laying down on the job.

With that all explained, the Editor is now ready to be seen slipping anything into the Flamingo Box.

FLAMINGO PINFEATHERS

The Flamingo Staff is playing the big-time circuit now—it is sporting a pin. If you would gaze upon the elite of the campus literary, humorous, and business talent, cast about for a fellow-citizen on whom is pinned a shining silver "F" mounted with a gold Bird pin. Without further ado, here are some choices: The Flamingo pin will be at the disposal of any spirit of democracy. For the guidance, collection, and handling of such material to approximately fifty or more interested individuals, we have an eight-piece set. The Flamingo takes pleasure in announcing the election of Charles Fundaberg, '26, to the position of Advertising Manager, and Miss Edna B. Taylor, '24, to the Contributing Staff.

Material for the December Number must be in the hands of the Editor on or before December First.
Wot d'yuh say? Let's forget about POP with a handful of bills — pitch in and next Saturday one real DAD'S DAY!

Two Scotchmen met and exchanged small talk. As they were parting to go to supper, Sandy said to Jock, "Jock, mon, I'll go ye a round on the links in the morn."
"The morn?" repeated Jock doubtfully.
"Aye, mon," said Sandy, "I'll go ye a round on the links in the morn."
"Aye, weel," said Jock, "I'll go ye. But I had intended to get married in the morn."

There was a small job of diving to be done, and, in the absence of the regular divers, an Irishman who had just been engaged to work the air pump, volunteered to go down. He had scarcely been down long enough to begin work when he gave the signal that he wanted to come up. As soon as he was on the boat, he motioned to have the helmet taken off.

SO IT GOES
I never wore a dinner-coat,
Or anything that looked half formal,
But every other soul I'd note
Was dressed in tweeds or serges normal;

I never went to an affair
In striped tie and suit of gray,
But every person who was there Fooled me, and dressed the other way.
—Jester.
