Moonlight in Rome's Piazza Navona

By Melanie Vanderkolk

Strands of moonbeams light up their faces, those dancing without hesitation, moving in a gypsy delight; those who've caught the soul of the wine in their feet and have harmonized their bodies with this Empire of history and its celestial Pantheon.

They question nothing, natives and tourists alike, only asking you to be one with the cascading reflections in the Bernini fountains, and the moonbeams lighting your face.
