On Monday, March 26, the Speech Communication Department is hosting Julia T. Wood's visit to campus. Dr. Wood, Associate Professor of Speech Communication at the University of North Carolina, will present a departmental seminar and Women Studies Colloquium. She has served as co-founder of the National Annual Conference on Gender and Communication Research, Associate Editor for Women Studies and Communication Symbolic Interaction, and Communication Monographs. She has published extensively in the area of interpersonal communication, small group communication, and gender and communication. Among the works she has authored are Small Group Problem-Solving Discussions and Communication and Human Relationships: The Study of Interpersonal Communication. Dr. Wood's reputation as a feminist scholar in communication is nationally and internationally recognized. Her colloquium, "A Feminist Critique of Research in Interpersonal Interaction," promises to enlighten us of the interdisciplinary nature of human communication. I strongly urge you to announce this presentation to your classes.

I hope to see you on the 26th.
