Dear Friends of Women's Programs:

This Sunday, October 1st, at 7:30 p.m. in the Faculty Lounge, we will once again celebrate "WOMEN'S VOICES." Every year in the Fall we gather for an evening devoted to words of women--poems, stories, journal entries, songs, personal narrative--that students and faculty and staff have selected. In past years the event has invigorated, inspired, often surprised, and even mesmerized those present (do you recall Anuja Guleria's authentic Indian dance last year?). The evening is many things, among them entertaining.

In addition to marking this event on your calendar, please read this announcement as an enthusiastic invitation to select and recite something on Sunday evening. Also, would you announce this program in your classes as well as encourage any interested or potentially interested students to participate? Some students see this event as an opportunity to read some of their own work in front of an appreciative audience. Both women and men have read at "Women's Voices" in the past years.

Please inform either of us by Friday morning (September 29th) if you will read (and ask students to do the same)--this will enable us to organize a modest program. And, of course, if you are indecisive until the last minute, just arrive Sunday evening bearing your reading. The evening also offers refreshments and the most wonderful people you could ever hope to have gathered in one room anywhere, much less the 4th floor of Slayter Union.

Best regards,
