Welcome to Issue 33 of The Synapse Intercollegiate Magazine! My name is Susan Robinson-Cloete (OC ‘24) and I am really excited to start off this year alongside our additional new Editor in Chief, Emma. I hope this year’s issue piques your curiosity and pleases your eyes! At Oberlin College & Conservatory I study Neuroscience as well as Writing and Communication with a concentration in Global Health. Before stepping into this new role I have spent the past two years working as the Art Coordinator. One of my favorite things about the Synapse is the emphasis placed on making interesting scientific discoveries and topics accessible to all. I hope you find in this issue topics which fascinate you and leave you wanting to learn more. Thank you to everyone who has contributed to this issue, layout editors, artists, writers, and the entire board. I’m incredibly proud of what we have created and hope you enjoy!
