Contributors Notes

Sara Randall Almirall is a high school graduate from the bad side of the tracks in Saginaw, Michigan. A large part of her spare time is spent feeding her extremely cultured mind with back-to-back reruns of Beverly Hills, 90210. Sara is now a senior Studio Art major with a growing love for the arts—culinary that is.

Hillary Campbell, a junior English (writing) major, philosophy minor, and Co-Editor-in-Chief of Exile, is probably watching The X-Files right now.

Paul Durica, junior, loves to fly and it shows. His story "Dancing" is forthcoming in Higher Education: A Reader for College Lives. He is the editor-in-chief of MoYO magazine. Like all of his stories, this one is for Mrs. P.

Mary Ann T. Davis' birthplace and home is Louisville, Kentucky. She is a sophomore transfer student from Hollins College (now University) in Roanoke, VA. At Hollins she studied creative writing and is now part of the writing program here at Denison. She considers herself a poet but has been known to write poetry that (gasp) extends from margin to margin. To address the name issue: it solely depends on your preference. Mary, Mary Ann, Hey Fly Honey...but, alas, her favorite nickname cannot be divulged. Well, okay, if you ask nicely. Really nicely.

Amy Deaner is a senior English (literature) major from Akron, Ohio.

David Fry is a senior Studio Art major with concentrations in drawing and sculpture. "Butterfly" is from Spring, '98, Printmaking II. Thank you Tiffany!

Camille Gammon-Hittelman is a senior Studio Art major focusing in photography but dabbling in paint. She wishes she could play outside instead of studying for class.

Tom Hankinson is a freshman who is absolutely fascinated by bright pieces of plastic. He stumbles around and babbles incoherently after two cans of root beer (one of A&W), and frightens small children with his renditions of 1970s rock songs. Tourists are advised against feeding him toast.

Seth Ireland is a senior English (writing) major and philosophy minor from Guilford, Vermont. His current writing project is an autobiography.

Jamie Kijowski is a senior philosophy major from Youngstown, Ohio. He lives at the Homestead. He's a capricorn. And an elite member of Water.

Edward S. Knotek II, a junior who whiles away the hours reading El Quijote, would like to become a knight-errant like the ingenious hidalgo, though he would prefer to receive a few less drubbings and win more reknown for his actions.

Katie Kroner is a sophomore English (writing) and Communication double major. She's from Cincinnati and can't imagine life without its brilliant Autumns. She enjoys reading, writing, and all her misadventures with Denison's Pep Band, and is also a member of Denison's One-to-One program.

K. Moore is a sophomore Physics and Classical Civilizations major from Northern Virginia. Besides Exile, Moore is involved with the Denison Frisbee Ultimate Club (DFUC), En Garde: The Denison University Corps of Swashbucklers, the Juggling Club, and the Rock-Climbing Club. Moore is an avid reader, writer, and musician, and is on the lookout for a 6'2", tenor, left-handed baseball pitcher who may have been mislaid in Greece this summer.

John Joseph Novak II was born in the small town of Chillicothe in Southern Ohio. Currently a Studio Art major in his senior year, John hopes to someday rule the world and fight for the Good in all of us.

"My name is Peter Rees, my father's name is Phil. We live on Otey's Rd., right here in Chapel Hill. My phone number is very clear. I'll whisper it in your ear. It's 929-2493, I remembered, golly gee!!!" Peter is a senior German major with a minor in Theatre. He was abroad in Germany last semester. He puts D-76 in his coffee and wishes that people would appreciate his talent for putting things off until the last minute...maybe in the next life.

Bekah "Exile-Fascism-is-Dead" Taylor likes to pretend she is not a junior English/Women's Studies major halfway through with all she needs to know at D.U., but in fact a rock star flying through the stratosphere until she crashes down in front of a computer with a hoarse voice, callused fingers and a paper to write.

Emily Vogel is a senior English (writing) major from Bridgewater, New Jersey.

Nancy Fan Wu is a junior Computer Science major from China and Pakistan. Her areas of interest include landscape and architectural photography. She has learned patience and consistency from her photography, and plans to become a computer graphic designer...and travel around the world with her camera!!

Abigail Marie Young is a senior Fine Arts major with an emphasis in performance. She is based in Indianapolis, Indiana. She started her experimentation with texture and color at about age 2 with her mother's lipstick. From there her accomplishments include a disciplined paint-by-number done with a toothpick (oil), an emotive contribution to a PTA contest in 6th grade, "The Lonesome Janitor" (crayon), shown at The Capitol gallery, and a photographic showing of "Life in Art in Sarasota," and miscellaneous others. She is currently studying photography and planning a career in acting and producing.
